Journal Overview

F*families in Society*—The Journal of Contemporary Social Services is a core publication in social work scholarship and is a trusted forum for social service professionals to explore and share ideas and concepts in the fields of social work and human services. Published by the Alliance for Children and Families, the articles in the journal represent the art and science of social work, and are at the forefront of emerging issues and trends in the field. Those that can benefit from FIS are practitioners, clinicians, administrators, researchers, policy analysts, health professionals, educators, and students.

Because of social work's unique concern with the person-in-the-situation, across the life span, and across generations, FIS articles typically reflect the broad array of issues, conditions, and problems that apply to individuals, families, communities, and society. Readers are informed of significant trends and practical techniques through articles on research and theory, direct-practice issues, and the delivery and management of services. FIS also invites literary formats other than the standard manuscript that readily capture the humanistic qualities of practice. Such formats might include brief commentaries, reports of experiences, reflections on practice, personal essays and narratives, and critical discussions.

In keeping with the Alliance's knowledge-building efforts for the field, authors may be invited to discuss their published article by presenting a teleconference or Webinar, developing a discussion guide with talking points, or preparing sample questions for continuing education and training.

Author Guidelines

For complete submission instructions, visit FamiliesInSociety.org/Writing.asp. Manuscripts not following these instructions will not be reviewed until all guidelines have been met. Queries regarding the suitability of potential articles are welcome. Please contact the editor at Editor@FamiliesInSociety.org.

Manuscripts must be written in APA style according to the most recent edition of the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association. Prior to submission, it is essential for the manuscript to be reviewed for grammar, sentence clarity, and wording. Contributors are strongly advised to have a statistician or methodological expert review the accuracy of discrete data found in the article text, tables, and figures. Please ensure all citations in the "References" section are properly transcribed and formatted.

The manuscript body must be 20 pages or less in length (double-spaced, 12-point font); the page count for the manuscript in its entirety (including abstract; references; and accompanying figures, tables, or appendices) can not exceed 28 pages. Along with a cover letter, mail two (2) printed copies and e-mail an electronic version of the file(s) to: Manuscripts@FamiliesInSociety.org. Each copy should include a cover sheet with the name, title, and the affiliation of each author. The next page should include the manuscript title and abstract (limited to 120 words), followed by the body, references, and tables/figures of the article.
