

Voices From Around the World: International Perspectives on Family Foster Care

Family foster care is increasingly utilized globally as a service for children and their biological families. In cooperation with the International Foster Care Organisation (IFCO), Families in Society presents a unique collection of articles highlighting the development of family foster care as it expands in such regions as the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, United Kingdom, Italy, Ghana, and more. This special issue examines evolving models of care and includes contributions by child welfare administrators and practitioners, foster parent associations, educators, and researchers.
