Guidelines for Book Reviews

Book Title: _____

Book Reviewer: _____ Due Date: _____

Reviews should inform readers of new books in various fields and critique those books so that readers can decide whether this book will enhance their knowledge and skills, or bring new perspective to a given subject. The review should also reveal whether the writing and content is clear and accessible, and whether discussion of a complex or controversial issue is learned and thoughtful.

With those goals in mind, we offer the following guidelines and suggestions for writing a thoughtful and useful review:

- Generally, begin with a discussion of the topics the book addresses and what the author(s) purports to add to the existing literature in the field.
- Very briefly describe what is covered in the book, the depth and originality of the content, and whether the content is presented in a way that is both thought-provoking and clear. Does this publication provide a well-rounded knowledge base on the related topic?
- Discuss the position of the authors on social, political, or other issues. Is the point of view new or controversial? (Describe.) Are there competing perspectives that the readers should know about? Are there important topics for readers to consider that have been neglected or left out of the book? Is there another book that is better suited for its subject?
- Summarize your impressions of the book's worthiness. Is it worth adding to one's professional library? Why? Who should read it? Describe how you think the book may have utility for readers or how its applicability might be limited. Do you recommend it? What made an impact on you during your reading, or, alternately, failed to impress you?

Reviews following the above guidelines should be approximately three to five double-spaced typed pages. Please include your name, agency/academic affiliation, and contact information (e-mail, or mailing address) at the bottom of the review. Submissions are due within 4 to 6 weeks.

You may keep the book after completing the review. If, after receiving it, you are unable to complete the review, you must return the publication to Families in Society as soon as possible so that an alternate reviewer can be found promptly. After reading your review, the editor or journal staff may contact you if they require any clarification or elaboration.

Please e-mail the completed review as an attachment to Reviews@FamiliesInSociety.org, along with the signed publisher's agreement form. The form can also be faxed or mailed to: (414) 359-1074, or Book Review Editor, Families in Society, 11700 W. Lake Park Dr., Milwaukee, WI 53224-3099.
